A large, light gray speech bubble with a dark gray outline. The bubble has a long tail pointing towards the bottom left corner. Inside the bubble, there is a block of text in a dark gray serif font.

“What’s the point of looking at arguments about how to answer these questions, if we can’t know for sure
which is right?”

Suppose further that you really care about the origins of life on earth. Does that fact that no biologist can tell you what the origins in fact were mean that you should not look at the arguments given for the competing theories?

That does not seem reasonable.

Or take a less intellectual example. In the recent past many of you spent some time thinking about where would be the best place for you to go to college. Was there a proof you could find, or some infallible authority you could consult?

But that didn't make it unreasonable for you to think long and hard about the arguments in favor of various options. Just the opposite — because you cared about this question and because there was no authority to consult, it was more important for you to think hard about the arguments.

That is a bit like the attitude I want you to take toward philosophy. Questions about whether God exists, whether you have free will, and how you should form beliefs are questions which you should care about. So, just as you cared about the arguments for and against various options for college, you should care about the arguments for and against (for example) the existence of God.

A large, light gray speech bubble with a dark gray outline. The bubble has a long tail pointing towards the bottom left corner. Inside the bubble, there is a block of text in a dark gray serif font.

“What’s the
point of looking at arguments about how to answer these questions, if
we can’t know for sure
which is right?”

that fact that no biologist can tell you what the origins in fact were mean

Support further that you really care about the origins of life on earth. Des

That doesn't seem reasonable.

that you should not look at the arguments given for the competing theories?

some time thinking about where would be the best place for you to go to

could be. Was there a proof you could find, or some infallible authority you could consist?

the arguments in favor of various options. Just the opposite — because you care about this question and because there was no authority to consult, it

But that didn't make it unreasonable for you to think long and hard about you should form beliefs are questions which you should care about. So, just as you read about the arguments for and against various options for college, you should care about the arguments for and against (for example)

That is a bit like the attitude I want you to take toward philosophy.

Question about whether God exists, whether you have free will, and how the existence of God.

some time thinking about where would be the best place for you to go to

Or take a less intellectual example. In the recent past many of you spent could be. Was there a proof you could find, or some infallible authority you could consist?

the arguments in favor of various options. Just the opposite because you care about this question and because there was no authority to consult, it

But that didn't make it unreasonable for you to think long and hard about you should form beliefs are questions which you should care about. So, just as you are about the arguments for and against various options for college, you should care about the arguments for and against (for example)

That is a bit like the attitude I want you to take toward philosophy.

Questions about whether God exists, whether you have free will, and how the existence of God.