

If there is no life
after death, is death a bad thing?

Is there life after death?

A large orange circle with a thin grey border, centered on a white background. Inside the circle, the text "If life after death is possible, is it desirable?" is written in white, serif font, arranged in three lines.

If life after death
is possible, is it desirable?

When we were discussing the nature of persons, we discussed the question of whether life after death is possible. Life after death seems pretty clear possible on proponent of soul survival or psychological views; matters are trickier if materialism about persons is true, but even here there is room to believe in the possibility of life after death.

But of course even if life after death is possible, that doesn't tell us whether or not there is life after death. Let's turn to that question now.

There are a number of arguments for and against life after death
that I'll mention only briefly and then set aside.

The first is what might be called the argument from religion. There are as many versions of this argument as there are religions; here is one:

1. Christianity is true.
2. If Christianity is true, there is life after death.

C. There is life after death.

I'm not setting aside this kind of argument because it is bad.

Rather, I am setting it aside because a discussion of the first premise would take us too far afield. We have already discussed arguments relevant to it — the arguments for God's existence, and the argument from evil.

Can we prove that there is life after death?

on prevention of soul survival or psychological views; matters are trickier if materialism about persons is true, but even here there is room to believe in the possibility of life after death.

When we're discussing the nature of persons, we discuss the question of whether life after death is possible. Life after death seems pretty clear possible

I don't tell us whether or not there is life after death. Let's turn to that question now.

But of course even if life after death is possible, that

There are numbers of arguments for and against life after death

that I'll mention only briefly and then set aside.

The first is what might be called the argument from religion. There are as many versions of this argument as there are religions; here is lila afte dedia.

C. There is no diff. at all.

1. Christianity is true.

2. If Christianity is true, there is premise would take us too far afield. We have already discussed

I'm not setting aside this kind of argument because it is bad.

and the argument from evil.

Rather, I am setting it aside because a discussion of the first arguments relevant to it — the arguments for God's existence,

But of course even if life after death is possible, that doesn't tell us whether or not there is life after death. Let's turn to that question now.

There are a number of arguments for and against life after death that I'll mention only briefly and then set aside.

many versions of this argument as there are religions; here is one

The first is what might be called the argument from religion. There are as

2. If Christianity is true, there is life after death.

c. There is life after death.

1. Christianity is true.