

We began with three different kinds of things to which we apply the categories of good and bad, or right and wrong.

certain actions
are right or wrong

certain
outcomes or situations are better or worse
than others

A solid green circle with a subtle drop shadow, centered on a white background. Inside the circle, the text "certain people or lives are better or worse than others" is written in a white, sans-serif font, arranged in five lines.

certain
people or lives
are better or worse than others

The consequentialist takes the goodness or badness of situations as fundamental, and tries to explain the others in terms of these. What would it look like if we took one of the other categories as most fundamental?
