

I hope that our class has disabused you of this notion. However, in this last class, I would like to turn the tools of philosophical analysis on two questions of great current concern.

Was the College Football Playoff
committee's decision to exclude
Notre Dame competent, or
incompetent?

Was the College Football Playoff committee's decision to exclude Notre Dame honest, or corrupt?

Logically that there are four exclusive and exhaustive possibilities.

The decision
was
competent
and honest.

The decision
was
competent
and corrupt.

The decision
was
incompetent
and honest.

The decision
was
incompetent
and corrupt.

1. If the committee's decision was competent and honest, then the committee did not rely on absurd principles in making its decision.
2. The committee relied on absurd principles in making its decision.

C. The committee's decision was not competent and honest. (1,2)

The argument is valid, and the first premise is obvious. It remains therefore to demonstrate the second premise.

The committee's task is to rank the country's football teams from best to worst, based on their performance. This is a general kind of task. One might also seek to similarly rank the best universities, or best philosophy departments, or best cars, or whatever.

One may rely on various principles in constructing rankings of this kind, and the appropriate principles will of course depend on the subject matter of the ranking. Nonetheless we can isolate one general kind of principle which one might use, which I will call a magic touching rule.

A magic touching rule is a rule which says that when two of the ranked items are 'touching' — i.e., adjacent in the rankings — then we look to a special extra condition — this is the magic part — to see whether the two touching items in the ranking should have their spots flipped.

Magic touching rule

If two teams in the ranking are touching and played head to head and the lower ranked team defeated the higher ranked team then the teams' rankings are flipped.

The committee employs a rule of this kind.

Some people think that philosophy is of no relevance to everyday concerns.

would like to turn the topic of philosophical analysis into questions of great hope that our class has disabled you of this notion. However, in this last class, I current concern.

Was the College Football Playoff
committee's decision to exclude
Notre Dame competent, or
incompetent?

Was the College Football Playoff
committee's decision to exclude
Notre Dame honest, or corrupt?

The decision
was
competent
and honest.

The decision
was
competent
and corrupt.

The decision
was
incompetent
and honest.

The decision
was
incompetent
and corrupt.

2. The committee relied on absurd principles in making its decision.

The committee's decision was not competent and

1. If the committee's decision was competent and absurd principles in making its decision.

honest, then they committed not rely on honest.(1,2)

Here is an argument against the first possibility.

remains therefore to demonstrate the second premise.

The argument is valid, and the first premise is obvious. It the best universities, or best philosophy departments, or best cars, or whatever.

from best to worst, based on their performance. This is a

The committee's task is to rank the country's football teams general kind of task. One might also seek to similarly rank of this kind, and the appropriate principles will of course use, which will call a magic to which rule.

depend on the subject matter of the ranking. Nonetheless we

One may rely on various principles in constructing rankings can isolate one general kind of principle which one might

A magical thinking rule is a rule which says that when two of the ranked items are 'touching' i.e., adjacent in the

is the magic part — to see whether the two touching items in the rankings should have their spots flipped.

rankings — then we look to a special extra condition — this

