moral relativism

One might use this case to give the following argument against moral relativism:

The argument is valid. (It is of the form: P ; If Q , then not- P ; therefore not- Q .) Which premise should the relativist reject?

It seems hard for the relativist to reject premise (2); perhaps the way to go is to reject premise (1). Is this plausible?

1. People from different cultures (like Douglass and Sepulveda) sometimes disagree about morality.
2. If moral relativism is true, people from different cultures never disagree about morality.

C. Moral relativism is false. (1,2)
