

moral realism

moral
nihilism

moral relativism

The view that one ought to tolerate diverse perspectives is really an argument for a kind of moral realism: a moral realism which places high value on tolerance.

It is also worth emphasizing in this connection that the moral realist can say that many choices are, from a moral point of view, equally good. The moral realist need not make the claim that for every choice between A and B, one of A and B is morally better than the other. The moral realist instead makes the much more modest claim that for some choices between A and B (e.g., whether to own slaves), one of A and B is objectively morally better than the other.

Given this, moral realism is not in conflict with the view that various diverse ways of living one's life are equally good. Indeed, insofar as that is the claim about objective goodness, it is an expression of one variety of moral realism.

realism: moral realism which places high value on perspective is really an argument for a kind of moral

The view that one ought to tolerate diverse to | erance.

realist can say that many choices are, from a moral point of the much more modest claim that for some children, the that for every choice between A and B , one of A and B is morally better than the other. The moral realist instead makes view, equally good. The moral realist need not make the claim objectively morally better than the other.

and B (e.g., whether to own slaves), one of A and B is

It is also worth emphasizing in this connection that the moral

Given this, moral realism is not in conflict with the view that various diverse ways of living one's life are equally good.

Indeed, insofar as that is the claim about objective goodness, it is an expression of one variety of moral realism.