

moral realism

moral nihilism

moral relativism

1. One ought to respect moral systems other than one's own.

C. Moral realism is false.

One option is that it means 'objectively ought.' Then the argument is equivalent to this one:

Is this a good argument? No: the truth of the premise implies the falsity of the conclusion; this is the opposite of a valid argument!

1. It is an objective moral fact that one ought to respect moral systems other than one's own.

C. Moral realism is false (and so there are no objective moral facts).

1. One ought to respect moral
systems other than one's own.

C. Moral realism is false.

One option is that it means 'objectively right.' Then the argument is equivalent to this son:

conclusion; this is the opposite of a valid argument!

Is this a good argument? No: the truth of the premise implies the falsity of the systems other than one's own.

there are no objective moral

1. It is an objective moral fact

C. Moral reasoning (and so that one ought to respect moral if acts as).