

Let's try to lay out Sider's reasoning by isolating the various features of the traditional doctrine of heaven and hell that he thinks are inconsistent with the existence of a perfectly good God.

“A certain traditional conception of the afterlife is binary. After death one proceeds either to heaven or hell. Heaven is very, very good; hell is very, very bad. There are no possibilities for the afterlife other than heaven and hell, and membership in heaven or hell is never indeterminate or a matter of degree. The problem with the binary conception is that it contradicts God's justice. God must employ some criterion to decide who goes to heaven and who goes to hell. No reasonable criterion would be sharp; any reasonable criterion will have borderline cases. But the binary conception of the afterlife allows for no corresponding fuzziness in how the dead are to be treated. Hell must therefore contain people who are nearly indiscernible in relevant respects from people in Heaven. No just God would allow such a monstrously unfair thing.”

It is part of the traditional doctrine that God decides whether people go to heaven and hell based on certain properties of those people. We will leave open for now what those properties might be; just to have a name for them, let's call them the relevant properties.

Badness

Dichotomy

Non-universality

Divine
control

Justice

Proportion- ality

Continuity

It seems difficult to deny Justice, Badness, or Divine Control. So that seems to give the defender of the afterlife four main options.

Let's consider the situation.

From a Catholic perspective, a natural thought is to reject Dichotomy.
That is because, according to Catholic doctrine, some people after death go, not to heaven or hell, but to Purgatory.

This is thought of as a kind of place of purification, in which sins not forgiven in one's life on earth might be forgiven.

the paradox of heaven and
hell replies to the paradox

evil & lives
not worth
living

the existence of a perfectly good God.

traditional doctrine of heaven and hell that he thinks are inconsistent with

Let's try to layout Sider's reasoning by isolating the various features of the

It is part of the traditional doctrine that God decides whether people go to Let's call them the relevant properties.

heaven and hell based on certain properties of these people. We will have open for what those properties might be; just have a name for them,

It seems difficult to deny Justice, Badness, or Divine Control. So that seems to give the defender of the afterlife further main options.

Let's consider the situation.

That is because, according to Catholic doctrine, some people after death

go, not to heaven or hell, but to Purgatory.

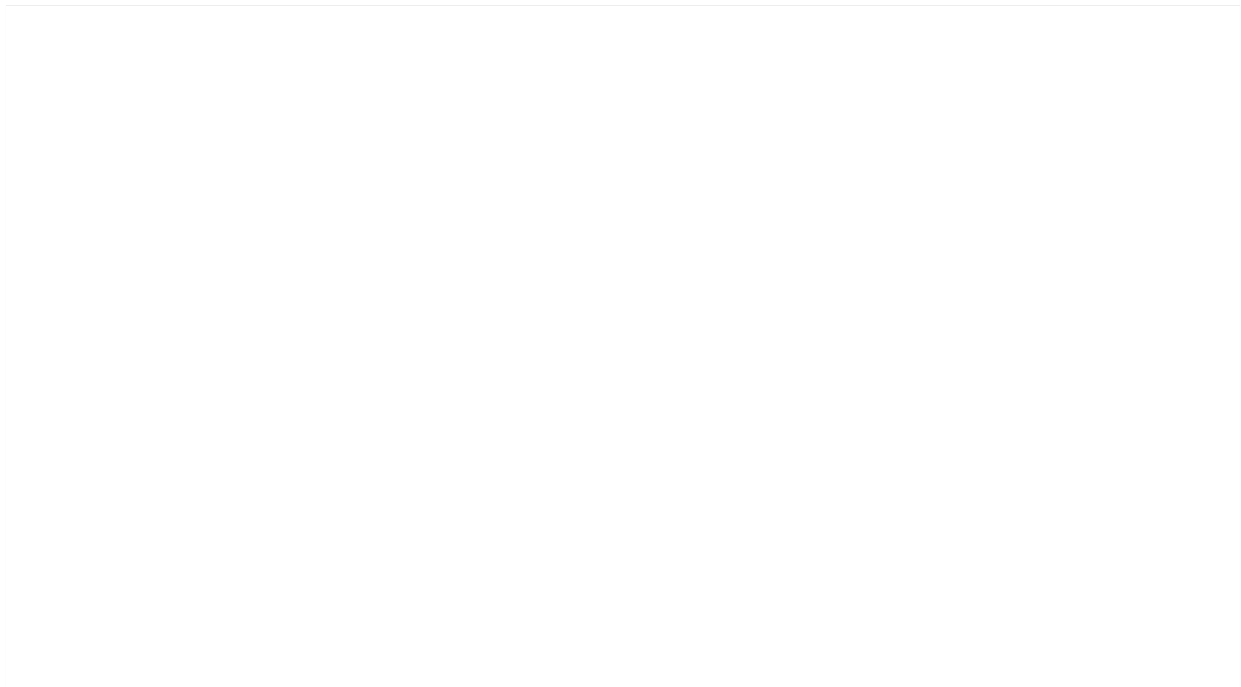

From a Catholic perspective, a natural thought is to reject Dichotomy.

This is thought of as a kind of place of purification, in which sins not forgiveness in one's life on earth might be forgiveness.

The following passage from the Catechism of the Catholic Church describes the kind of view wanted to discuss:

1038. The resurrection of all the dead, 'of both the just and the unjust,' will precede the Last the angels with him... Before him will be gathered all the nations, and he will separate them one from eternity in life!

another as a shepherd separates the sheep from the into external punishment, but the rights into but the goats at the left.... and they will go away goats, and he will place the sheep at his right hand, Judgment. Christ will come "in his glory, and all

One topic often associated with belief in God is the topic of life after death.

many of the major monotheistic religions compatible with the existence of a

Our first question today is: what we are told about life after death by perfectly good Good?

right hand, but the goat at the left... and they will go away into eternal punishment, 1038. The reservation of the dead, "of as a shepherd separates the sheep from the

and the wild sheep are then from another but the rights are all in it.

goats, and the wild prairie sheep at his

Before him will be gathered all the nations, both the just and the unjust," will proceed the Last Judgment. . . Christ will come "in this glory, and all the angels with him.

talk of the last judgment wouldn't make much sense.)

This certainly seems like a picture according to which, after death, God passes got to heaven forever, and some others to hell forever. (If not 'forever', then the judgement on all of us, and on the basis of our life, decides that some of us will

Turned-in showed why it is plausible that respo to the argument from evil view of life after death we get here on pain of being perfectly good?

must depend on the possibility of life after death. We will now ask: is the kind of

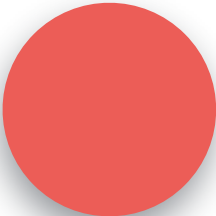

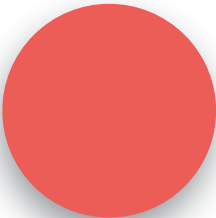

evil & lives
not worth
living

the paradox of heaven and
hell

Badness

Dichotomy

Divine
control

Justice

replies to the
paradox

forgiveness in one's life on earth might be forgiveness.

This is thought of as a kind of place of purification, in which sins not