

On this view, your survival requires that something exists which has the right psychological connections to you.

This is enough to get a grip on what a materialist theory might look like. Let's turn now to our third theory (we'll come back to the soul theory in a bit).

psycho-
logical
survival

materialist
survival

A solid red circle with a subtle drop shadow, centered on a white background. Inside the circle, the words "soul" and "survival" are written in a white, bold, sans-serif font, stacked vertically.

soul
survival

This view also gives rise to an immediate question:

What psychological connections are needed for survival?

Why do we think that you can survive Brain Transplant?

Arguably because the person who leaves the surgery
would be psychologically continuous with you.

which has the right psychological needs to you.

On this view, your survival requires that something exists

This is enough to get a grip on what a materialist theory come back to the soul theory in a bit).

might look like. Let's turn now to our third theory (we'll some people.

John Locke gave one answer to this question.

This view of personhood can be illustrated by considering a few different stages in the lives of psycho-

logical
survival

materialist
survival

A large, solid red circle that fills the entire frame, serving as a background for the text.

soul
survival

Arguably because the person who leaves the surgery

would be psychologically continuous with you.

Why do we think that you can survive Brain Transplant?

psycho-
logical
survival