properties, and

phenomenal properties can cause physical properties.

A second answer is: Yes.

Physical properties can cause phenomenal
properties; but phenomenal properties cannot cause physical properties.

A third answer is: No.
Physical and phenomenal properties cannot causally interact.

Let's start with the parallelist. This looks like the craziest of the three views -- why would anyone hold it?

One reason for taking parallelism seriously is that causal connections between the physical and mental realms can look very puzzling.

One historically very important argument that there can be no causal connections of this kind was given by Elisabeth of Bohemia, a 17th century German philosopher.

“it seems every determination of movement happens from the impulsion of a thing moved, according to the manner in which it is pushed by that which moves it ... Contact is required for [this]. ... contact seems to me incompatible with the idea of an immaterial thing.”
