

the basic
argument

allowable
evils

A large, solid orange circle serves as the background for the text.

what is omnipotence?

the
argument
reformulated

We have seen that there is reason to doubt premise (6) of Mackie's argument. But the counterexamples to premise (6) we have considered suggest a way to repair the argument.

Every case in which it seemed like a being could legitimately allow some evil to exist was one in which the evil was outweighed by some good which the being could not bring about without the evil. That suggests that the following claim is plausible:

Our examples of parents and dentists cast no doubt on (5^*) .

Indeed, if anything, they support it.

6. If something is wholly good, it always eliminates as much evil as it can.

5*. If something is wholly good, it always eliminates as much pointless evil as it can.

Let's see how our argument looks if we simply replace the problematic premise (5) with (5*).

have considered suggest a way to repair the argument.

We have seen that there is reason to doubt premise (6) of Maackie's argument. But the counterexample to premise (6) we

Every case in which it seemed like a being could legitimately

so me evil to exist was one in which the evil was outweighed by some good which the being could not bring about without the evil. That suggest that the following claim is plausible:

Indeed, if anything, they support it.

Our examples of parents and dentists cast no doubt on (5*).

good, it always reminds

as in the first case.

6. If something is wholly

5*. If something is wholly

good, it always reminds

it can be

as much points as

Let's see how our argument looks if we simply replace the problematic premise (5) with (5*).

2: If something

cairibiriing about

is important, it

any possible

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (2000) has set out a vision for the future of mental health care, which includes a commitment to 'improving the lives of people with mental health problems' and 'ensuring that people with mental health problems are treated with respect and dignity'. The Department of Health (2000) has also set out a number of key principles for the future of mental health care, which include a commitment to 'person-centred care', 'partnership', and 'equality'.

One of the key challenges for the future of mental health care is to ensure that people with mental health problems are treated with respect and dignity. This requires a change in the way that mental health care is delivered, from a focus on treatment to a focus on recovery. Recovery is a process, and it is a process that is unique to each individual. Recovery is not a linear process, and it is a process that can take time. Recovery is a process that involves a number of factors, including social support, self-help, and professional support.

One of the key challenges for the future of mental health care is to ensure that people with mental health problems are treated with respect and dignity. This requires a change in the way that mental health care is delivered, from a focus on treatment to a focus on recovery. Recovery is a process, and it is a process that is unique to each individual. Recovery is not a linear process, and it is a process that can take time. Recovery is a process that involves a number of factors, including social support, self-help, and professional support.

One of the key challenges for the future of mental health care is to ensure that people with mental health problems are treated with respect and dignity. This requires a change in the way that mental health care is delivered, from a focus on treatment to a focus on recovery. Recovery is a process, and it is a process that is unique to each individual. Recovery is not a linear process, and it is a process that can take time. Recovery is a process that involves a number of factors, including social support, self-help, and professional support.

One of the key challenges for the future of mental health care is to ensure that people with mental health problems are treated with respect and dignity. This requires a change in the way that mental health care is delivered, from a focus on treatment to a focus on recovery. Recovery is a process, and it is a process that is unique to each individual. Recovery is not a linear process, and it is a process that can take time. Recovery is a process that involves a number of factors, including social support, self-help, and professional support.

One of the key challenges for the future of mental health care is to ensure that people with mental health problems are treated with respect and dignity. This requires a change in the way that mental health care is delivered, from a focus on treatment to a focus on recovery. Recovery is a process, and it is a process that is unique to each individual. Recovery is not a linear process, and it is a process that can take time. Recovery is a process that involves a number of factors, including social support, self-help, and professional support.

One of the key challenges for the future of mental health care is to ensure that people with mental health problems are treated with respect and dignity. This requires a change in the way that mental health care is delivered, from a focus on treatment to a focus on recovery. Recovery is a process, and it is a process that is unique to each individual. Recovery is not a linear process, and it is a process that can take time. Recovery is a process that involves a number of factors, including social support, self-help, and professional support.

6. If God exists, then God

1. If God exists, then God is

elinitatesas much printless

2. If something is on it,

7. If God exists, then God

elinitates all points less vi1.

4. If God exists, then God is

it can do anything.

3. If God exists, then God can wholly good.

prints even as it can.

no point less evi1. (7)

5*. If something is wholly good,

do anything. (1,2)

it always initiates as much

8. If God exists, then there is

(3,6)

evil as God said. (4,5)

9*. Some principles exist.

C. God does not exist. (8,9)

allowable
evils

A large orange circle with a slight drop shadow, containing the text "what is omnipotence?".

what is omnipotence?

the
argument
reformulated

So attention naturally focuses on premise (5).

5. If something is wholly

good, it always reminds

as in the visit card.

9*. Some points less

evivivis. exis. stis.

A large, solid orange circle serves as the background for the text.

what is
omnipotence?

There are two especially important arguments against belief in God.

the basic
argument

allowable
evils

the 1990s, the number of people with a mental health problem has increased by 50% (Mental Health Foundation 2000). The prevalence of mental health problems in the UK is estimated to be 10% (Mental Health Foundation 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of people with mental health problems. The Department of Health (2000) has published a strategy for mental health care, which aims to improve the lives of people with mental health problems. The strategy is based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, with their own needs and strengths.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in the community.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to work and study.

The strategy also aims to improve the lives of people with mental health problems by:

- Improving the quality of care.
- Improving the access to care.
- Improving the support for carers.
- Improving the support for families.

The strategy is based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, with their own needs and strengths.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in the community.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to work and study.

The strategy also aims to improve the lives of people with mental health problems by:

- Improving the quality of care.
- Improving the access to care.
- Improving the support for carers.
- Improving the support for families.

The strategy is based on the following principles:

- People with mental health problems should be treated as individuals, with their own needs and strengths.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to participate in decisions about their care.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to live in the community.
- People with mental health problems should be given the opportunity to work and study.

eliiiiiiiatesiiiiiiiGod

can. 45)

8. If God exists, then there is

elinites all envil.(3,6)

no evil in (7)

C. God does not exist. (8,9)

9. Since we exist: