

We are near the end of our discussion of freedom of the will. Free will is an important topic in its own right; but as we have seen, questions about free will are also closely intertwined with questions about the existence of God.

Our discussion of the free will defense identified two important assumptions which someone hoping to explain evil in terms of free will must make.

Free will is a great good.

Even God could not have given us free
will while ensuring
that we never used
that free will to bring about evil.

We have free
will.

We have talked at length about the first. Has our discussion of free will shed any light on the second two assumptions?
