does free will explain all evil?

1. It is possible for all people to have free will and yet never bring about any evil.
2. God can bring about any possible situation.

C. God could have made a world where all people have free will and yet never bring about any evil. (1,2)

How should the proponent of the free will defense respond to this argument?

If the conclusion of this argument is true, then no evil can be explained by the good of human free will, since that good could have existence without the evil. In this case, the free will defense gives us no cause to reject premise (9*).

Free will cannot explain any evil.

Free will can explain some evil; but it can't explain all of the evil we find in the world.

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are employed in the public sector has increased by 1.5 million, from 2.5 million in 1980 to 4 million in 1995. The public sector has become a major employer in the UK, and its growth has been a major factor in the overall growth of the economy.

The public sector has also become a major employer of women. In 1980, women made up 40% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 50%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing participation of women in the workforce, and the increasing demand for public services.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with disabilities. In 1980, people with disabilities made up 1% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 3%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing demand for public services, and the increasing awareness of the needs of people with disabilities.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people from ethnic minorities. In 1980, people from ethnic minorities made up 1% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 3%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing demand for public services, and the increasing awareness of the needs of people from ethnic minorities.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with low qualifications. In 1980, people with low qualifications made up 1% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 3%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing demand for public services, and the increasing awareness of the needs of people with low qualifications.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with mental health problems. In 1980, people with mental health problems made up 1% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 3%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing demand for public services, and the increasing awareness of the needs of people with mental health problems.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with physical health problems. In 1980, people with physical health problems made up 1% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 3%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing demand for public services, and the increasing awareness of the needs of people with physical health problems.

The public sector has also become a major employer of people with long-term health problems. In 1980, people with long-term health problems made up 1% of the public sector workforce, and by 1995, this figure had risen to 3%. This increase has been driven by a number of factors, including the growth of the public sector, the increasing demand for public services, and the increasing awareness of the needs of people with long-term health problems.
