

free will
and determinism

against
compatibilist
free will

against
incompatibilist
free will

More precisely, our topic is the relationship between freedom of the will and determinism, and a cluster of arguments which seem to show that free will can be neither compatible nor incompatible with determinism — and hence is impossible.

What is 'determinism'?

Consider a timeline of the history of the universe.

Our topic today is the challenge to free will posed by determinism.

"Determinism is the thesis that only one continuation of the state of things at a given moment is consistent with the laws of nature."

impossible.

neither compatible nor incompatible with determinism — and hence is

More precisely, our topic is the relationship between freedom and determinism, and a cluster of arguments which seem to show that free will can

Consider a timeline of the history of the universe.

containing the state of things at a given

'Determinism is that only one movement is consistent with the law of conservation of energy.

happened in the distant past.

1. No one has any choice about events which varlatatie + the last of the theorie about the fact that if DNR

if P , then Q , then one has any choice

5. No one has any choice about what the laws

7. If none has about choice about whether P, of interest.

6. If $\det A$ is true, then A has any

2. None has any choice about DIDS. ATJR.

future is not distant with the state of the

then DECISION. (4,5)

and none has any choice about whether,

then DECISION happens. (3)

3. If determined, the only one nature say that if DINS ARE happy,

4. If determinism is true, the laws of

C. If determinist is true, then no one has any about whether @.

choice about DECISION (2, 6, 7)

combination of four - that No

This argument seems to show that the choice about the laws of nature, then no choice principle, and determinism

one has any choice about the past, no rules out free will.

seems to show that if determinism is

seem quite plausible, the argument true, there are no free actions — and hence that free will is incompatible with

Since the first three of these theses

Wili.

2. If Libertarianism is true, there is no free

1. Freewill is incompatible with determinism.

0: There is no fire will.

Real/|the master argument:

The consequence argument is a defense of premise (1). If you believe tempting to reply to the master argument by denying premise (2).

in free will, and find the consequent argument persuasive, it looks

free will
and
determinism

against
compatibilist
free will

A large red circle with a slight drop shadow, containing white text. The text is arranged in three lines: 'against', 'incompatibilist', and 'free will'.

against
incompatibilist
free will

reality of free will.

We can lay out this puzzle in terms of the following master argument against the

1. Freewill is incompatible with determinism.

Wili.

2. If Libertarianism is true, there is no free

0. There is no fire in.

Compatibility believers in free will reject premise (1). An incompatibilist believe in free will rejects premise (2).

Now, so far we have been given no reason to think that either premise (2) for (2), and one for (3).

or premise (3) is true. We're now going to look at two arguments — one

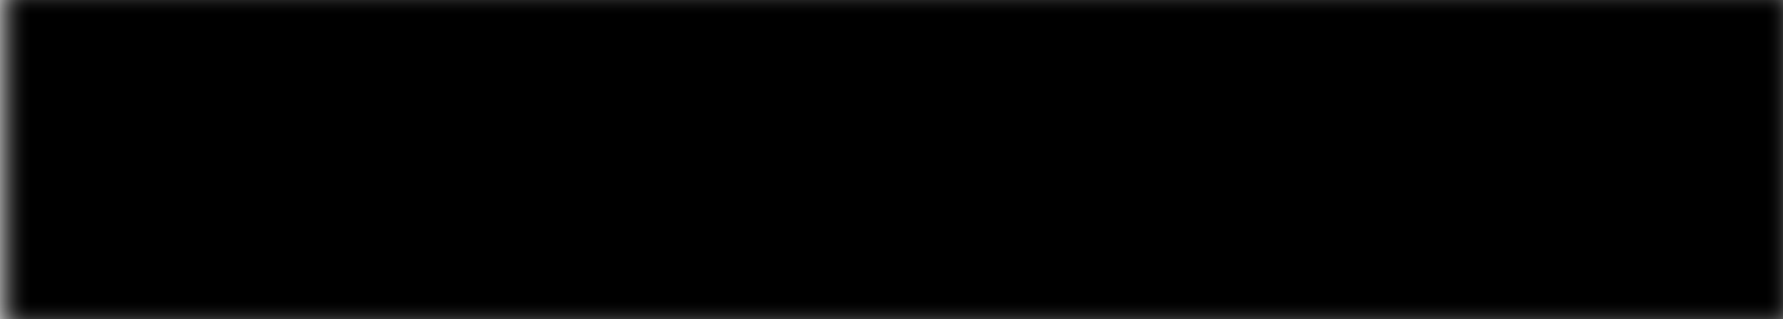

A large, solid orange circle with a subtle drop shadow, serving as a background for the text.

against
compatibilist
free will

determinism, and a cluster of arguments which seem to show that free will is incompatible with both determinism and indeterminism, and hence impossible.

More precisely, our topic is the relationship between freedom and

"Determinism is the thesis that only one continuation of the state of things at a given moment is consistent with the laws of nature."

What is 'determinism'?

Consider a timeline of the history of the universe.

Our topic today is the challenge to free will posed by determinism.

"Determinism is the thesis that only one continuation of the state of things at a given moment is consistent with the laws of nature."